DiagnosTechs

DiagnosTechs offers a method of testing saliva called ELISA testing. Saliva testing looks at the "unbound hormone levels" also known as "free fraction hormone levels" which are the hormone levels that are available to be used by the body's tissues. This gives you a better idea of the levels of hormones that are actually influencing the tissues, rather than just the level of hormones that are present in the tissues. To learn more about saliva testing, click here.

The DiagnosTechs website does a great job of explaining the various issues and conditions the tests are being recommended for. It is a great resource for learning more about the endocrine system which involves in this case, the adrenals and sex hormones. To learn more, click here and click on the particular test of interest. On the left, you will see link options for learning about the test and performing the test.

One test we often recommend is the Adrenal Stress Index (ASI). The importance of measuring your cortisol levels is explained in detail. To learn more, click here.

These tests are done at home and then sent directly to the lab for evaluation.

Instructions for general saliva collection and stool are as follows, click here.

For DiagnosTechs billing policies, click here.

DiagnosTechs will offer every client the direct patient pay cost per test, and upon request, patients will be provided with a "Superbill" that includes the Test Panels, Lab codes, CPT codes, Diagnosis codes, description of tests, charge per test, EIN for DiagnosTechs, Inc., providers NPI, and other relevant information needed for submitting an insurance claim.

When submitting to Traditional Medicare, an Advanced Beneficiary Notice (ABN) is required. In general, the saliva testing is not covered and the patient will be responsible for the price of the test.